Marysville moving on

from Julie Foletta

The next community meeting of the Marysville and Triangle Development Group will focus on moving on, who plans to do what, and what, if anything, is holding them back.

All business and landowners in the Marysville and Triangle area are encouraged to come along and let others know where they are at.

At last Sunday's fortnightly MATDG community meeting held at the Marysville Golf Club, there was a general sentiment that progress on rebuilding had slowed due to a number of factors; and there was a lack of incentive to reinvest in the town.

We heard of one business that will be occupying space in the museum. Who else will be there?

There are a few new houses in the town. Who is planning to return and how many houses are being planned? How many part-timers/weekenders are planning to rebuild?

No one really knows how many accommodation businesses are planning to rebuild either, or when the forest walks will be reopened.

Marysville and the Triangle once offered a lifestyle and a destination. Without residents, businesses, employment, weekenders, accommodation, tourists and attractions people may not have the confidence to reinvest.

So get along and let everyone know your plans so the town can once again be alive. Melbourne-based residents should also attend.

This meeting will be held at 3pm on Sunday 18 October at the Marysville Golf Club.
